

College Enrollments Outstrip Projections

By VINCENT THOMAS
 Assemblyman, 68th District
 Higher education is certain to be one of the dominating topics at our 1967 session. Problems which are not anticipated when the Master Plan for Higher Education was first enacted in 1959 have arisen. One of the most significant is the fact that enrollments have increased more rapidly than those projected at the time the Plan was enacted.

The number of full-time students enrolled in the University of California has increased by 61 per cent in the last five years. The State Colleges have expanded even more, up 74 per cent. Enrollment in the junior colleges has skyrocketed 89 per cent. That in the private colleges has gone up 35 per cent.

THE UNIVERSITY has established three new campuses. Four new State Colleges have been opened. Eleven new junior colleges have been authorized. However, with half of our state's population under 25 years of age the pressure for additional expansion at all levels should be obvious.

One matter which is certain to come up for discussion is financing for the State Colleges. Their Boards of Trustees complain that lack of fiscal authority and flexibility has hampered them in providing the highest quality of education possible to the continually growing number of students. Effective administration of the 18 existing campuses, and planning for four new ones has been impeded. Greater state support for the junior colleges is a familiar problem which will come up for attention again. ANOTHER COMPLEX problem is that of proper planning for an unimpeded flow of eligible high school graduates into the various public institutions of higher learning. This has two important aspects. First is that of attracting and holding the most competent faculty for each institution. Second is the need for additional scholarship aid to deserving students. While the state now provides scholarship funds for 1 per cent of the state's high school graduates, high school graduates, leaders in higher education are recommending a new program of aid to graduate students so as to attract more of them into teaching as a career.

Today, we are told, there are a number of new factors which are of special concern in public higher education. Foremost among these is the subject of a special legislative committee investigation.

Increasing share in policy determination for their institutions. Third, is federal legislation relating to higher education.
